*A Look at How the Department
Protects and Serves Alabama
Farmers and Consumers*

ALABAMA FARM-CITY AWARD WINNERS

TRADING WITH THE WORLD

of the state Department of Agriculture & Industries.

Alabama farmers and agribusinesses must adopt what McMillan calls a "global approach" to agriculture production. To this end, the Alabama Department of Agriculture & Industries on May 15 will hold a one-day conference for farmers and agribusinesses to provide insights on international trade and how to export products to foreign markets.

"Exports mean jobs and greater opportunity for Alabamians. Our competitors, especially Canada, have in recent years moved aggressively into international markets and taken a major position in agricultural exports," McMillan said. "Conditions for international trade are improving, one of which includes recent passage of Free Trade Agreements with three nations."

McMillan announced the one-day conference, entitled "Trading With the World," to be held at the Birmingham Marriott. Registration is open to farmers and agribusinesses. There is no charge for

A diversified Dallas County farm was named the state's 2012 Farm of Distinction during the Alabama Farm-City Awards luncheon in Birmingham. At 68, the farm's owner, Sam Givhan, has seen a lot of changes in agriculture at Givhan Land and Cattle Co., but it's his ability to change and adapt that's made his farm successful. His farm expanded from traditional Black Belt crops, like cotton and soybeans, to catfish and cattle.

"When I was a kid, most of the farming was done with mules," Givhan recalled. "We had a few old tractors that did some ground work, but the plowing and planting and all that — and the harvesting of cotton — was done by manual labor and animal power. Over the years, we've finally evolved into trying to do as much no-till farming as we can here. We still do some things the old way, but agriculture in this area has really changed."

As this year's winner, Givhan will represent Alabama in the Swisher Sweets Sunbelt Expo Southeastern Farmer of the Year contest October 16-18 in Moultrie, Ga.

During the Farm-City Awards program, Givhan received a John Deere Gator, donated by SunSouth, Snead Ag and TriGreen Equipment dealers in Alabama, plus a $1,250 gift certificate from Alabama Farmers Cooperative, redeemable at any of its member Quality Co-Op stores. The Alabama Farmers Federation and Alfa Health presented Givhan an engraved farm sign, and they also will receive a $2,500 cash award and an expense-paid trip to the Sunbelt Agricultural Expo. The Swisher Sweets Sunbelt Expo Southeastern Farmer of the Year will receive $14,000, plus several other prizes.

A Vietnam veteran, Givhan returned to his family farm near Safford in 1969, and by 1972, he was running the operation

REWARD OFFERED

Alfa Insurance is offering an additional $10,000 reward for information leading to a conviction for the theft of copper and other metal from poultry houses, farm irrigation systems and other property in Alabama covered by an Alfa Insurance policy. Alabama Farmers Federation members already benefit from a $1,000 reward for theft from their property.

“The theft of copper wiring and other valuable metal is growing, especially in our rural communities,” said Alfa Insurance and Alabama Farmers Federation President Jerry Newby. “Criminals who commit these acts cost our policyholders money, and they often do thousands of dollars in damage to property and cripple the equipment and buildings farmers depend on for their livelihoods.”

The $10,000 reward will be paid to the first person that furnishes information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons for the theft of copper or other metal taken from property in Alabama covered by an Alfa Insurance policy.

Alfa Insurance is the leading insurer of farms in the state. In recent years, dozens of farmers and other rural residents have reported property damage related to copper theft. Anyone with information related to the theft of copper is encouraged to contact local law enforcement officials.

In the last few years, Alabama has strengthened penalties for metal theft. The Federation currently is supporting a bill in the Alabama Legislature that would further deter metal theft by requiring buyers of scrap metal to collect additional information about the seller.

Farm-City Awards

as president and manager. Today, the farm spans more than 4,500 acres and includes about 2,000 acres of row crops, a 400-cow commercial beef cattle herd and 250 acres of catfish ponds. While Givhan's biggest crop remains soybeans, he said catfish have played an increasingly important role in recent years.

“We've been growing some catfish for about 20-25 years now, but I got serious about it about 15 years ago,” Givhan said. “I saw the handwriting that you're either going to have to get to a viable size operation or get out, so we invested and went into it, and it's been one of the better ends of the operation for the last few years.”

Givhan and his wife, Lynne, have two sons involved in the farm. The oldest, Sam, is an attorney, while David manages the beef and hay operations.

Givhan served 26 years as president of the Dallas County Farmers Federation and is a former board member of the Alabama Farmers Federation. He is president of the Central Alabama Farmers Co-op and incoming chairman of the Alabama Farmers Co-op board of directors.

FARM-CITY

Other Farm of Distinction finalists from around the state also were recognized during the Farm-City awards luncheon, which was held in conjunction with the Alabama Farmers Federation's Women's Conference. The finalists were: Donald and Janice Hodge of New Market in Madison County; Paul and Carolyn Beavers of Trafford in Jefferson County; and Joe and Faye Williams of Newton in Dale County. Each one of them received a $250 gift certificate from the Alabama Farmers Co-Op and an engraved plaque.

County Farm-City committees, as well as poster and essay winners, were also recognized at the luncheon.

FARMERS Use GIS

Today's farmers have more technology at their disposal than ever before. One piece that is expected to greatly impact the production of food and fiber is geographic information systems (GIS) technology.

According to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the world's population will reach 9.1 billion by 2050, 34 percent higher than today's population. According to GIS software technology firm Esri, the ability of GIS to analyze and visualize agricultural environments and workflows has proven to be very beneficial to those involved in the farming industry.

"GIS is crucial in agriculture as it can be used to understand everything from where to better apply fertilizers to mapping various conditions of the soil. The information is processed immediately and indicates to farmers whether they need to adjust their strategy to improve production, which directly impacts revenue, food and products for the world's population," says Devon Cancilla, Ph.D., dean, business and technology at American Sentinel University.

GIS tools help farmers conduct crop forecasting. For instance, using Esri's ArcGIS, farmers can collect georeference samples in cultivated areas and apply a statistical process to the samples.

After completing the data, they can create a geodatabase that helps farmers make better decisions. This forecasting measure helps them better accurately conduct harvests and save on spoilage, meaning more food gets to people.

While Esri is the dominate software firm in the GIS space, several other software houses make GIS applications for the farming industry. Farm Credit Canada recently launched Field Manager PRO 360, which allows farmers to take a closer look at their operations using satellite imagery.

Developed in partnership with Logiag, an agri-environmental specialist company, FM PRO 360 shows aerial images of fields so producers can map and compare their yields.

Other agriculture GIS solution providers include SST Software, PCI Geomatics, Case Corp. and Land View Systems. In fact, agriculture is thought to be one of the fastest-growing GIS customer bases.

attendance and registration is limited to 125. Deadline is April 30.

"Our goal is to help Alabama farmers and agribusinesses learn the process of international trade and expand their opportunities in export sales, especially as new foreign markets are opening up with the recently passed Free Trade Agreements," McMillan said.

The Southern United States Trade Association (SUSTA) is a co-sponsor in the conference, providing expert advice on how to lessen the risks of international marketing. SUSTA offers a range of services to producers, manufacturers and distributors of U.S. agricultural products.

Other presenters include persons from the Alabama International Trade Center, Alabama Department of Commerce (formerly the Alabama Development Office), Alabama State Port Authority, Alabama Legislature, Bremen Investments, and BLG Logistics.

Admission to the conference is free. To sign up, go to ALexportconference.com and click on the registration tab. For more information, contact: Deputy Commissioner Brett Hall at 334-240-7101 or brett.hall@agi.alabama.gov.

PRODUCT SPOTLIGHT

Sweet Melissa's Sauces & Seasonings, LLC is a home-based business in Birmingham that began in August 2008. After many years of trial and error, Randy Thomas and his wife, Beth, felt they had perfected their three products: Jalapeno Dippin' Sauce, Ruby Red Sauce and Barbeque Rub.

After several years of making the sauces and rub for family and friends, they were encouraged to begin bottling their products and take them to local stores and markets. The research began and a co-packer was found to produce the sauces and rub.

If you have ever tasted the Jalapeno Dippin' Sauce, you understand why it is "Sweet Melissa's" favorite. It blends quality, all natural ingredients to compliment and intensify the flavor of any meat, cheese, fruit or vegetable creation. You will have fun crafting your own recipes and discovering the unlimited possibilities for a symphony of new tastes to enjoy and share with friends. It also makes a great gift that is always appreciated.

The Ruby Red Sauce blends the freshest and finest ingredients together to make a spectacular spicy sauce. It is delicious with any of your favorite grilled meats. It also tastes great mixed in ground meats for burgers or meat loafs to add a little extra flavor. It even tastes great on portabella mushrooms.

The Barbeque Rub blends just the right amount of spices to bring out the flavor of your meat. Use the rub on chicken or pork for at least 30 minutes and up to 2 hours before grilling. For the best taste, especially for ribs, rub on and marinate overnight. This also works for seasoning for burgers, meat loafs and even tacos.

McMILLAN RECEIVES T. WHIT ATHEY LEADERSHIP AWARD

John McMillan, longtime agricultural leader and current commissioner of the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries, received the T. Whit Athey Award from the Alabama Cattlemen's Association. The annual award is presented to individuals who exemplify the gentle, quiet and effective agricultural leadership of the late Thomas Whitfield Athey Jr.

McMillan grew up in Baldwin County in the same house in Stockton where his 99-year-old mother still lives. His early education was at Stockton School, followed by the Baldwin County High School and Rhodes College, where he earned a BA in Economics. McMillan met his wife, Kathryn, in high school and recently celebrated his 46th wedding anniversary. They have two sons, Murphy and William, and two grandchildren, El and John.

As a child, McMillan worked on his uncle's farm and in his father's sawmill. After college, he continued working at the family sawmill for nearly 20 years. His first venture into public service was in 1969 when Governor Albert Brewer appointed him to a vacancy on the Baldwin County Commission. He was elected a state representative in 1974 and chaired the Agriculture, Forestry and Natural Resources Committee for the state House of Representatives.

McMillan served as commissioner of the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources under Governor Fob James. He was given the opportunity to work for the Alabama Forestry Association in 1983, and in 1986 was selected to its executive vice president position, which he served as for the next 20 years.

During his career, he has had the opportunity to serve as chairman of the Alabama Forestry Council, the Alabama Council of Association Executives and the Alabama Civil Justice Reform Committee and as a member of numerous business and agricultural organizations, including the Montgomery Rotary Club and the Auburn University President's Commission on Agriculture. He served two terms on the State Personnel Board and also served on the board of the University of South Alabama Foundation.

He was elected as commissioner of the Department of Agriculture and Industries in 2010.

NEW BUILDING FOR AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH

Researchers and Extension System specialists who serve Alabama farmers now have a modern, efficient place to work thanks to a new Alabama Farmers Federation Administrative Building at the Tennessee Valley Research and Experiment Center in Belle Mina.

Federation President Jerry Newby said, "I've always been an advocate for supporting facilities and projects that would help our farmers be more successful on their farms."

The research center at Belle Mina has been serving farmers for more than 80 years.

"The addition of this facility will help sustain agriculture in this area and throughout the state as this center continues its mission to improve the profitability of farmers," Newby said.

The 4,000-square-foot facility includes 12 offices and a small conference room with video conferencing capabilities. It was funded with annual donations totaling $1 million from the Federation since 2007.

Established in 1927, the Tennessee Valley Research and Extension Center is nationally recognized for its long-running cotton programs, but it also is a leader in precision agriculture and irrigation research. Last year, the center conducted 95 agricultural experiments on everything from grain crops

Batchelor said a report would soon be released showing that precision agriculture research done at Belle Mina and other experiment stations in Alabama has generated $30 million for the state's farmers. That kind of result, he added, is the mission of Alabama's land grant universities.
